Roemer Nursery History

Roemer Nursery, Incorporated was founded in 1960, by Gied Stroombeek and his late wife Ann, on ten acres of land. Gied was trained in Boskoop, Holland, as a propagator and was employed by Warner Nursery in that capacity for eight years. At first conceived as a liner nursery, Roemer grew into a container production nursery when Gied and Ann planted the excess seedlings and cuttings and grew them on to a finished size. Always on the leading edge of propagation and growing, Roemer soon became known as a quality supplier of container material.

Currently, the nursery covers thirty plus acres including greenhouses, propagation facilities, potting shed, offices and holly beds. The Display Garden adjacent to the residence is one and a half acres, and is open to visitors.

New and exciting plants have been introduced at Roemer from abroad, and from the selection of outstanding examples from production. Gied's expertise in the propagation of broad-leaved evergreens, acquired from his Holland mentor, Siem Van Klaveren, has led to Roemer being known for fine Holly, Boxwood and Rhododendron. Many other families of plants are represented in our product offering, making Roemer Nursery a full service container nursery.

ROSA

One of the most desirable of all plants, roses have been a preferred plant for centuries. Though no rose is totally trouble free, we have tried to select easily cared for cultivars in a variety of colors and habits.

These roses can be used in groups, added to a border, planted as specimens or placed wherever seasonal color is needed.

Unlike the "touchy" hybrid tea, these shrub roses are just that - flowering shrubs.
